Certain statements contained herein may constitute “forward-looking statements,” which can be identified by the use of forward-looking terminology such as “may”, “will”, “should”, “expect”, “anticipate”, “target”, “project”, “estimate”, “intend”, “continue” or “believe” or the negatives thereof or other variations thereon or comparable terminology. Due to various risks and uncertainties, actual events or results or the actual performance may differ materially from those reflected or contemplated in such forward-looking statements.

The information herein is not intended to provide, and should not be relied upon for, accounting, legal or tax advice or investment recommendations.

This presentation is provided for illustrative purposes only to show a simplified example of certain fundamental aspects of investing in certain non-performing loans. Cerberus’ actual approach on any given portfolio may be materially different than the simplified example included herein.

One of the limitations of presenting hypothetical investment transactions and illustrative examples is that they are generally prepared with the benefit of hindsight, and do not involve actual financial risk. No hypothetical transaction can completely account for the impact of financial risk in actual investing. For example, the ability to withstand losses or to adhere to a particular trading program in spite of losses are material factors which can adversely affect actual results. There are numerous other factors related to the markets in general or to the implementation of any specific investment program which cannot be fully accounted for in the preparation of the illustrative examples set forth herein, and one or more of such factors can adversely affect actual investment results.

The investments made by the Cerberus Funds generally involve a substantial degree of risk.

The actual returns of the Cerberus Funds depend upon many factors, including many factors not addressed in this presentation. Such factors include, for example, among other things, future operating results, the value of assets and market conditions at the time of disposition, transaction costs, financing costs, the timing and manner of sale, transaction-level and Cerberus Fund-level costs, fees and expenses, and a variety of other factors.

No representation or warranty is made concerning the completeness or accuracy of this information. As a result of the inherent limitations of the information contained herein, prospective investors must not rely on any such information in making any investment decision with respect to the any Cerberus Fund.
